About ESPACOMP

ESPACOMP is a non-profit association established to promote the science of measuring and improving what patients do with medicines they have been prescribed. The Society's principal research topics encompass reasons for medication non-adherence, the clinical and economic consequences of it, and differences between caregivers' prescriptions and patients' execution of those prescriptions. ESPACOMP is concerned with facilitation of the translation of research into information that is useful to patients, healthcare providers, healthcare policy makers, and the pharmaceutical industry.
